5. Ukiyo, Cornwall

With views of Coverack Cove and a vast stretch of blue-green sea, Ukiyo's setting is unmistakably Cornish. Its style, however, draws on a range of influences: well-mannered Japanese simplicity paired with silvery larchwood from Siberia, and a clifftop terrace straight out of Greece. Add a wall of glass in the sitting room, and the effect is dazzling. Walks along the South West Coast Path begin almost at the front door. However, you may find yourself wishing for inclement weather so you can light a fire in the living room, settle back on the long window seat, and gawp.
