Forget schlepping to the beach - wake up with the sea and sand on your doorstep

If you're desperate for a holiday, but reluctant to venture too far, find

The Spyglass, Gorrán Haven, Cornwall

The Spy Glass has an impressive history (The Spy Glass )

Thought to date from the late 18th century, this two-bedroom house is built on the site of an original fort, created to defend the coast during Napoleonic times. After serving as two fishermen's cottages, it became a single holiday home in the 1930s, though nowhere near as sumptuously decorated as it is now – all with vintage coastal touches. We love the quirky sloping floors and furniture including an antique bass drum coffee table. Everything is high end – White Company bedding, Farrow & Ball painted walls, for example – while the views of the rugged coastline are to die for. No dogs. Sleeps four.

Three nights from £995

The Cable Hut, Aberbach, Pembrokeshire

Situated on the Pembrokeshire coast, The Cable Hut is a perfect getaway for two (The Cable Hut)

This romantic bolthole was originally a stone and corrugated iron cable hut housing the first telephone lines laid across the Atlantic Ocean. When the station was later abandoned, it stood derelict for years, until the current owners visited from London and decided to resurrect it. Located between the beaches of Abermawr and Aberbach, it is now a lovers' retreat that's truly isolated. We love the industrial style décor and luxury touches. No dogs. Sleeps two.

Three nights from £750
