The Lost Music Hall

no tates

In a hidden South Hams valley you'll find an enchanting homestay known as 'The Lost Music Hall'. This unique country escape once served as a London Dandy's secret retreat from society. Today it welcomes you to make yourself at home in his music hall of enormous proportions.

Inside, The Lost Music Hall pays homage to the property's Arts and Crafts roots, with a pared-back period aesthetic. Oak parquet flooring gleams in the light-filled living spaces and auction finds sit in harmony with pieces imported from the owners' New York loft. Upstairs, spectacular valley views wrap around the balcony, and each bedroom generously boasts not one but two double beds.

The music hall and adjoining manor sit in over seven acres of Devonshire countryside, shaded by ancient trees and crossed by the gurgling Ambrook river (perfect for a cool dip on a balmy afternoon). You'll have private use of the games room, terraces and back garden during your stay, as well as the heated outdoor swimming pool (May-September).

Maverick tip: Why not enhance your stay by booking a professional in-house chef, guided walk with Dartmoor's Daughter or a restorative wellbeing session with Down to Flow Escapes? Further details and recommendations are provided by Unique Homestays when booking.
