

Have you booked your 2023 UK break?

With the country front and centre on the world stage — plus the cost-of-living crisis — holiday lets, campsites and hotels are being snapped up early

Yikes, 2024? The truth is, if you have your eye on a particular property, it really is worth snapping it up now. Unique Homestays, for instance, say that its chic Anthology Farm (four-night stays for 18 from £7,195) is 77 per cent booked up for next July and August. It's alarming news for last-minute merchants like me — but good news for a country in need of a boost.
