

3 Great Scottish Trips To Plan Now

Scotland has so much to offer holidaymakers – from large areas of wilderness and rugged islands to beautiful stretches of sandy beaches, abundant wildlife and vibrant cities, there's a lot to explore. Whatever kind of trip you're planning, here's what to do and where to stay in three of Scotland's most beautiful areas.

ISLE OF SKYE

The second largest of Scotland's islands, Skye is a 50-mile amalgamation of sea cliffs, jagged mountains, huge lakes and vast moors. A beautiful destination for a summer staycation, the scenery is seriously impressive, and there's no shortage of activities on offer if you're travelling with younger family members. From London, it takes between ten and 11 hours to reach the island by car, or 14 hours via a sleeper train, though many travellers choose to spend a few nights in Glasgow first.

Supernova

Ideal for a romantic trip for or solo getaway, Supernova is a beautiful house which overlooks Loch Harport. The property was once a chapel and has since been carefully restored with many of the original features intact, including two entrance doors and beautiful arched windows. It has a reversed-level design, so the living areas make the most of the views, while the king-size bedroom sits on the ground floor down a bespoke spiral staircase, complete with its own en-suite. Guests can fire up the BBQ during the summer months and enjoy the welcome hamper which includes a bottle of prosecco.
